

Single Threaded Multi Process Blocking

How apache httpd did it (with pre-fork, kind of...)

The server implements a loop.

It waits for a client to arrive.

When the client arrives, the server forks
a new process.

The child process serves the client while the server is immediately ready to serve the next client.

Forking a process is kind of heavy...
and resource hungry